

Gender Mainstreaming and Popularization of Climate Change Strategies.

Key Messages

Veneranda Kambarangwe (Mwanza)

"Women should embrace the use of alternative energy for cooking. For example, I personally create my own charcoal from renewable sources. If anyone is interested, I am willing to teach them how to do it".

Naetwe Kilango (Tanga)

"Given the current climate situation, it is our responsibility to invest significant efforts in reducing the severity of its impacts. Both women and men should actively work towards lowering greenhouse gas emissions. Planting trees around our homes and educating the younger generation on environmental conservation are essential steps we should take".

Igarus Matei (Songea)

"Now! Let's engage Ward Executive Officers (WEOs), Executive Officers (MEOs) and the ward Chairperson in awareness programs with Regular dialogues should be held at community level to increase community awareness and participation on the National climate change strategies response"

Franklin Kamalamo (Mwanza)

"In environmental conservation, stakeholders should advocate for the implementation of stringent laws similar to those for offenses that can lead to a 30-year imprisonment. This is to deter individuals who pollute the environment, as they hinder our efforts to combat climate change".

Mama Maimuna (Mwanza)

"Let's utilize our resources more efficiently to minimize the environmental impact of our consumption. Every small effort can make a significant difference. In all these endeavors, we need collective efforts to take action and shift the course of climate change."
